TO MOTHER.

'Neath the fragrant palms of glory,
Where the skies are ever blue,
Ever telling that sweet story
Never old, yet never new.
Hallowed, sainted, angel mother,
Two years since you passed away;
Two years now with our dear Savior,
How we wish and long for thee.
Angel Mother, do you listen,
To the eulogy we sing?
Two years now you've been a princess
In the palace of the king.
Every rung goes high and higher,
We will climb to you some day,
Every moment brings us higher,
To this mortal rest of clay.

Henry Longdon,
Prof. Wm. Longdon,
Benj. V. Longdon,
Brothers,
Chas. Jones, Husband,
1421 Euclid Ave.

Mr. Allen Moore of 2460 Flora avenue, died Thursday morning at his apartment after suffering for several weeks. The funeral services will be held this afternoon at 1:30 at the Morning Star Baptist Church, Twenty-third and Vine streets, under the auspices of Mt. Olive Lodge, No. 53, A. F. & A. M. He leaves to mourn his demise a wife, Madame A. Moore, a well known music instructor; a mother, Mrs. Laura Moore, four brothers and a host of friends. Mr. Moore was for many years a mechanic at the Greenleaf Motor Car Company of this city.

Mrs. Robert Nolen, 2734 Highland avenue, gave an afternoon party last Thursday in honor of her sister, Mrs. Harry Craig, of Omaha, Neb., which was followed with a line party at night at the Auditorium Theatre. The house was beautifully decorated with flowers for the occasion and the dining table contained a center piece of fragrant sweet peas. There were twenty-six guests in attendance and all enjoyed themselves immensely. A Red Cross puzzle created much entertainment for the guests, the prize being won by Mrs. Fairley, wife of Lieut. John R. Fairley. Mrs. Craig left Tuesday for her home in Omaha.

Mr. William Davis, the best mechanic of the Buick shops, helped make the selection. Mrs. Davis is very very proud of her gift.

REALLY NO SECRET

Power to Charm Lies in Forgetfulness of Self.

Women Who Fascinate Have Simply Developed the Art of Putting Others "On Good Terms With Themselves."

A vivacious woman writer seeking the secret of feminine fascination, finds it in the art or power some women have of charming others by putting them, as a bluff Britisher phrased it, "on ripping good terms with themselves." Is not this a characteristic of almost all those persons, men and women, whom we like the best and enjoy the most? Do they not, either by artifice or by instinct, endeavor to make the people they meet feel that they amount to something, know something, have some excellence, attractiveness or interesting qualities, and thus put them on pleasant terms with themselves. The persons who are least adept at this or least inclined to try it are the self-centered, self-important people completely absorbed in their own affairs and not wise or well-bred in little worlds of which they are the centers, and may be said in a certain sense to revolute about themselves.

This is a characteristic brought up from lower forms of life from which we are ancestrally derived and only in part outgrown. For most animals the only concerns of the least importance are those which directly affect themselves. They are egocentric. The things that touch them make up their world and they have no interests outside of that. More than any other animal the dog can sink his personality so to speak, subordinate himself and make his master's interests his own. Only infrequent individuals of other species can or will do this. Hence dogs as a rule are more companionable for men than any other living creatures below him in the evolutionary scale.

But to return to human beings, Josephine was the most beloved and charming woman in France because she took a genuine and kindly interest in the affairs of all with whom she came in touch. She was outgoing, inclusive in her sympathies and thus contracted antagonism created by Napoleon, who was self-centered to an extraordinary degree. Not to multiply examples, does not experience teach all observant people that in selfishness lies the secret of charm? Are not the lovable people those whose love goes out spontaneously, or appears to be not egocentricity, entire absorption in themselves, a characteristic held in common by most of the people who get on one's nerves? Kind hearts are more than coronets, said Tennyson.
